Tea Party

"The Other Boston Tea Party," a boisterous drama "starring" Massachusetts Revolutionary Sam Adams, will be performed at the Museum of Our National Heritage in Lexington on Thursday, Sept. 17, at 8 p.m. in observance of the 200th anniversary of the signing of the U.S. Constitution. The performance is free and open to the public.

The play pits Sam and his wife, Betsy, against Sally Foster and her young and opinionated fiance, Boston aristocrat and statesman Harrison Gray Otis, in a verbal duel that challenges the very principles of government.

Robert Gross, professor of history and American studies, Amherst College, will lead a discussion of the play afterwards.

Zoning Hearings Tonight

Two of the eleven petitions for the September 3 Zoning Board of Appeals hearing concern residents of the Florence St. area.

Charles A. and Susan P. Papalia, 99 Coachman's Lane, North Andover, are seeking permission from the board to allow a third apartment in an existing two-family house at 20-22 Florence St. The Papalias are petitioning as a party aggrieved by the building inspector.

At the same meeting Jeffrey Sheehy, 30 Bailey Road, will ask for a special permit and variance for the purpose of constructing a fourth apartment next door at 24 Florence St.

The proposed additional unit would be located over the garage of the existing multi-family dwelling, and would not meet minimum setback zoning requirements. Both Florence St. properties site in a Single Residence A District.

Elsewhere, James A. Papia, Jr., 37 Juliette St., is seeking the board's permission for a single family lot off Lincoln St. which will have insufficient frontage (less than 150 ft.) to the public way.

Arthur and Priscilla Awley, 16 Avon St., are seeking a variance to allow the reconstruction of a proposed garage at their residence. The structure will not meet minimum side yard setback requirements.

Three resident petitions are for additions which will not meet minimum setback requirements.

Mark and Karen Courtney, 93 North Main St., are asking the board to allow the addition of a deck to their home. John and Mary Myers, 34 School St., are similarly seeking an addition to their dwelling, as is John Winters, 90 School St.

Timothy E. and Laurie A. Kenney are asking for an addition to their home at 5 Hillcrest Road, which does not have frontage on a public way.

Likewise, Stephen J. Asgeirson, 14 Glenwood Road extension, is petitioning for a variance to allow an addition to his residence.

May E. Elander, 1 Henderson Ave., is asking the board to allow the addition of a porch and ramp that do not meet minimum side yard setback regulations. The Henderson St. property is in a Single Residence A district.

Lastly, Robert Stocks and Susan Stocks, 81 Apache Way, Tewksbury, who are asking the ZBA to allow the continued existence of a dwelling and accessory building at 469 South Main St., which does not meet minimum setback requirements. The Stocks' lot, zoned for Single Residence C, also does not meet the 90 percent rule for zoning.

Responsibilities Increase For Paul

Tells Committee Of Year's Goals

By Lewis C. Howe

Reorganization of the central school administration has resulted in heightened responsibilities for Francis L. Paul, assistant superintendent for operations.

Paul, promoted from his post as business manager this spring, has set goals for the upcoming school year that reflect the broadened range of his duties. The five-page work plan Paul presented to the school committee Tuesday night outlines plans for a series of inservice training seminars on subjects ranging from the budget process to building maintenance. "The Operations Center should serve as an outreach program," Paul told the committee.

The Operations training sessions will instruct personnel in all phases of budget planning, as well as teaching financial functions like accounting and purchasing. Budget committees are being set up at each school this year to involve more people in the financial planning process, Paul said. The assistant superintendent has targeted December 4 for presentation of a Fiscal Year 1989 budget to the school committee.

Operations department will be focusing on facilities maintenance and security at an October seminar. Security will be a high priority this year, Paul explained. "With a half-million dollars in computers in the schools, it's definitely worth someone's while to back up a truck to the building on a Saturday night." Thus, Paul noted, better security systems are needed.

A seminar on data processing will help administrators learn how to use existing materials, and train them for more advanced tasks. Seminars are also scheduled concerning recruitment of personnel, the new Computer Plan for the Andover schools and the role of television in education.

Paul's day-to-day operations are also enhanced this year. Among his initiatives are work with the School Pupil Information Network (SPIN) Project, the Andover/Lawrence Collaborative School Project, and an upgrading of both the food service areas and the telephone system.

"Our phone bill was $85,000 for the last year," Paul commented, "I believe that's worth investigation." Consultants have been brought in from the phone company to examine the possibility of installing Watts lines or other advanced systems, he said.

The assistant superintendent for operations will also assist the school committee with their multi-year Master Plan, and continue the school accountant's training program.

In addition to his primary responsibility as a budget-builder, Paul will attempt to improve the school department's data processing system. Excessive demands on the present system need to be alleviated, Paul stated, in order to assure that "accurate, timely data" can be supplied to the department.

This project should be completed in time for the guidance office to "get those letters out to colleges," Paul remarked.

Another goal of Paul's is to revise the school bus transportation system, which he said has "grown helter-skelter" due to demographic changes in the community and the central campus kindergarten. "The entire system and accompanying route schedules must be revised" in time for the Fiscal 1989 budget, Paul's work plan said.

Members of the school committee questioned the feasibility of such an initiative. Committeeman David Birnbach noted a completed overhaul of the transportation system is "a massive task." Committeeman Richard Neal expressed concern that bids by bus companies could exceed the transportation budget allocation "by a considerable margin." Paul said he would examine this component further, and bring it back to the committee for discussion at a later date.

Both Paul and Lois Haslam, assistant superintendent for curriculum and instruction, will oversee the implementation of the Computer Plan. Haslam said the computer plan has been "moving along very well" so far. Staff training

Telephone Company, Town In Accord About Haverhill Street

Negotiations between town officials and representatives of New England Telephone should finally pave the way for completion of the phone company's work along Haverhill Street.

"New England Telephone is awaiting a letter from me to clear things," said Robert McQuade, public works director. "Negotiations are wrapped up" he added, saying most points of contention between the two parties "are being resolved."

The dispute stems from the phone company's failure to properly complete a 1986 project along Haverhill St. "The town was never satisfied with the way things weren't finished up," McQuade stated. "We were not satisfied with the condition of the roadway and the way they left the construction site."

New England Telephone, like other utilities, routinely install and replace cables and wires under local streets. These projects require permission from selectmen, whose approval is usually automatic.

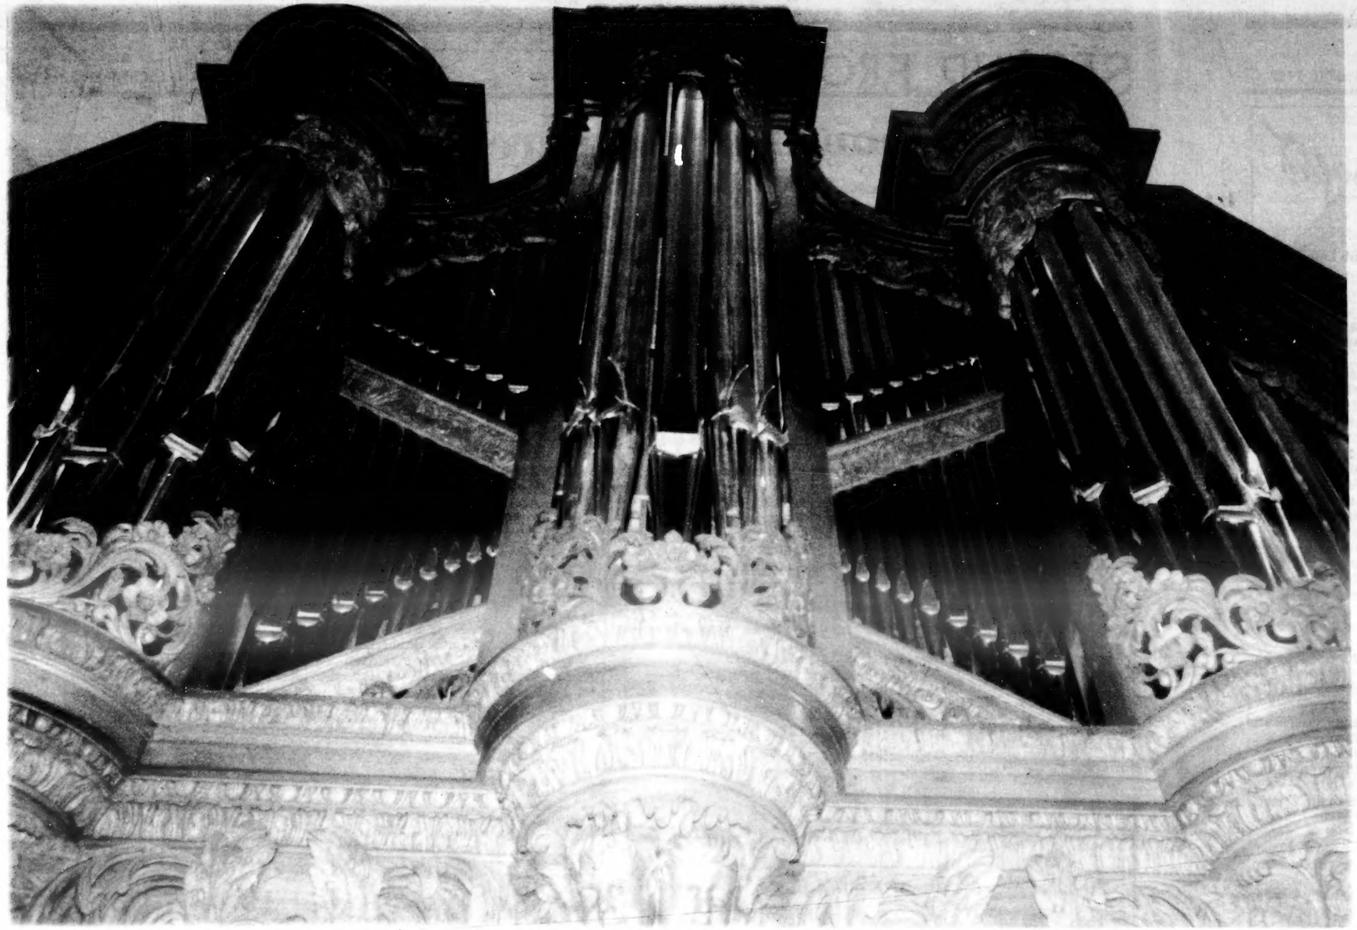
In an effort to force proper completion of work on Haverhill St., selectmen have been granting conditional approval for recent New England Telephone projects.

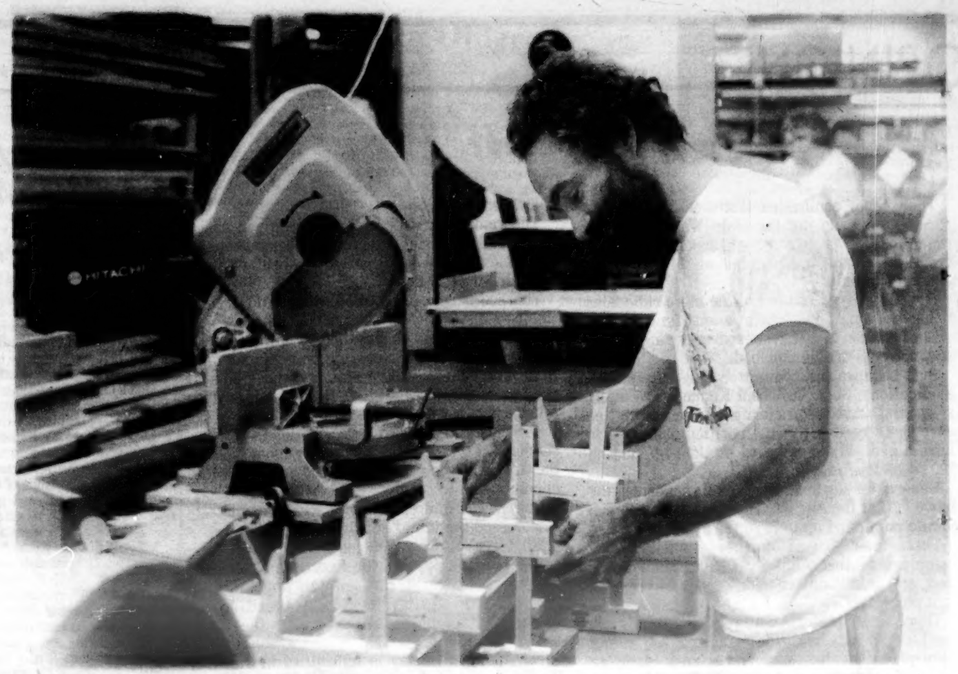
At the August 24 selectmen's meeting, Town Manager Kenneth Mahony, explained "New England Telephone has had a number of problems with some of their projects. We have held up their more recent projects subject to the completion of earlier work."

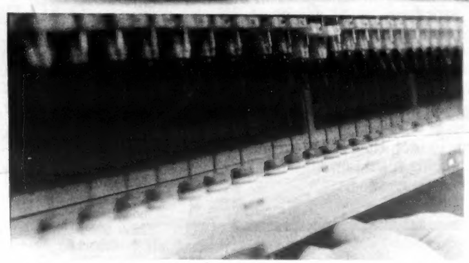
Elizabeth Kelly, representing the phone company, said an agreement had been worked out with the public works department. Mahony responded, saying that the agreements had not been honored by the phone company since "None of the actual work has been done yet."

Once the Haverhill St. project is out of the way, New England Telephone may begin digging in Andover's streets again. Areas conditionally approved for road work include River Road, High Plain Road, Woburn St. and Frontage Road.

The town manager has also asked residents with complaints concerning work done by New England Telephone, or any other public utility, to contact his office, rather than dealing directly with the company.







William Finch works on an impost, a band of moulding that will eventually adorn an organ for a Strasborg, Va. church.

General manager Donald Olson pulls the pallet, or valve, connected to the C sharp pipe. A constant supply of air must be provided to produce sound. The organist controls which pipe or group of pipes the air will go to with stop-knobs and the keyboard.

Mark Ikerd shapes metal around a cone form to make the foot of a pipe. Andover Organ casts its own metal—a mixture of lead and tin—right in the shop.

At top, the Cochran Chapel organ, which Andover Organ built in 1981. it replaced a 54-year-old Casavant organ that had become virtually unplayable. Above, a detail of the organ, showing the fine oak carvings that encased the old Casavant. Andover Organ built the new organ to fit in the old casing.

Making music that lasts forever

Andover Organ builds instruments the old-fashioned way

By Melissa M. De Meo

At what used to be the Arlington Mills in Lawrence, they repair organs. No, not the kind your body comes with, but the musical instrument. Still, the care they get equals that a good doctor would give. And best of all, they never complain about their accommodations.

Nor should they. Andover Organ Co. takes up three hardwood floors of the old mill building on Broadway. Connected by staircases that wind you dizzy, the floors are temporary home to organs needing fixing up and others that are still on the drawing board—literally.

Andover Organ doesn't make too many organs from scratch—about two a year—but they have a wide maintenace department that covers all of New England, plus New York State, New Jersey, Virginia and the Carolinas. Some of the repairs are minor ones, like replacing a worn part; sometimes the company will restore the whole thing.

It isn't as easy as it sounds. These aren't the organs that play schlocky music for shopping malls. These are pipe organs, the kind you imagine Vincent Price hunched over in a dark castle. The pipes can be more than 32 feet tall. You can actually walk inside some of them, like the one at Phillips Academy's Cochran Chapel. Andover Organ replaced the old Casavant organ that had occupied the ground floor of the chapel for almost half a century.

It was a fine instrument, said Phillips Academy organist Carolyn Skelton, but it wasn't built for Cochran.

"It was a very poor installation," Skelton said. "It was all encased in an organ case, and the acoustics were very bad."

A good organ should be a part of the building that houses it, almost a part of the architecture. Before Andover Organ makes an instrument, Donald Olson, general manager and visual designer, visits the building where it will go.

"I take measurements, check acoustics and space for the instrument," he said. "They're all custom designed. Visually, they have to blend with the architectural style of the building. Tonally, they have to fill space and acoustical needs."

Most of Andover Organ's customers are churches and a handful of schools. "On very few occasions do we find an organ in a home," Olson said.

Once Olson gets a feel for the building, he makes an estimate of the number of stops, or groups of pipes, that would be suitable and sends the list, sometimes with drawings, to the potential customer.

"Usually other people are doing the same thing, and the church decides who they want," Olson said.

Although price varies with size and other factors, an Andover organ usually costs between $9,000 and $12,000 per stop. A small organ might have 14 stops; the biggest one Andover built was in 1968 for the Lawrenceville School in New Jersey. It has 52 stops.

Help Wanted?

The school committee last week decided to once again hang out the Help Wanted sign in order to fill the high school principal vacancy created by the resignation of Mary Athey Jennings in July.

It would seem to be one of the more ridiculous things the board has done in a long time.

The position was advertised once, applicants sought and a deadline placed.

But, because the committee only received 24 applications, Supt. of School Kenneth R. Seifert suggested, and the majority of the committee agreed, to readvertise the position and hope to have a new person on board by the beginning of the second semester.

General feeling among those who supported the move is that the Andover High principal position should command up to 75 to 100 applicants.

That feeling was further supported by commentary that Andover should demand the best and additional candidates would enhance that possibility.

There was additional commentary on why the position should be held open and an acting principal appointed, such as summer being an inopportune time to seek a replacement for such an administrative position, and a pool of only 24 candidates does not do justice to those that applied.

All of this is hogwash.

What is going to happen, if, as the committee and administration suggests, there is a pool of 75 to 100 candidates the second time around.

Doubtless, the search committee will ditch at least half of those at the first meeting for one reason or another.

The remainder will probably be given short shrift until the roster is trimmed to somewhere in the vicinity of 20 to 25, which is about what is available in total now.

That list is scheduled to be whittled down to a finalist stage of five or six candidates.

Thus, there could be anywhere of upwards of 90 people with a genuine interest in serving Andover's educational community whose efforts are for naught, just to satisfy the whim of having a large pool of candidates.

A reinstituted search could lead to the supposition that a person who may have missed the first deadline might be a good possibility for appointment.

Or renewed interest by some local candidates, who missed the initial deadline.

Whatever the case, it seems unfair to those who applied for the position the first time around in the hopes of going through the appointment process and possibly being on board in a reasonable amount of time during the first semester.

The additional delay is unjustified in view of the interest expressed by 24 people who must have been capable and qualified for appointment as well as available to assume responsibilities at a much earlier time.

The reinstitution of the search process would seem simply to satisfy the Andover ego of attracting large masses to an administrative position when, in fact, that position could easily be en route to being filled now.

The delay is unwarranted.

Just A Thought

By Bob Finneran

Well, it's one of those three-day holiday weekends during which we hear constant reminders of the highway casualty rate, which state is worse and which one is safest, etc.

That's one of the reasons why it always seems safer to camp safely around the backyard, or as near to the benefits of paying the monthly mortgage payment as possible.

And, to relieve any semblance of boredom which may occur, I plan to ponder some pertinent questions just to pass the time away, such as:

Wonder if those kids who received awards at Memorial Hall Library for the summer reading program a week ago will get the Weebus from Frye Circle, or some other elderly housing project, for the dedication exercises at the completion of the library construction project. It may be that long before it's done.

Did women invent the gas grille, or its predecessor, the charcoal grille?

Seems the female of the species disappears from the kitchen during these summer months, with the male assuming the cooking chores.

Haven't seen a female laboring over the hot coals in the backyard or on the porch.

'Okay, Clyde, the burgers are ready,' Mabel shouts as he masterfully decorates the grill with ground chuck, soon to become Dante's Inferno, attacking the night's entree with a too-short spatula and hopes that the fire department is on standby.

Think about changing my name to Curoco, which is short for most of the mail addressed to my house. Current Occupant has been getting an awful lot of mail from various colleges and universities lately which is being assigned to the trash heap. Having successfully withstood the classroom challenge once is sufficient.

Not an autograph collector to begin with, I have to wonder why a bird chose me from the hundreds of people walking around Essex last Sunday to accurately deposit a reminder of his presence on the back of my neck and shirt.

Wonder if, when I leave this job, management will demand at least 100 applicants for the position like the Andover school department is doing for the high school principal's job. Or, will Townsman management be satisfied to review the 24 applicants who sought the position by the given deadline.

Wonder if the Andover selectmen have anyone in mind for letter writing, now that Bill Dalton has announced he won't seek re-election next year.

An inveterate and maybe, at times even an inconsiderate cigarette smoker, I'm about to join any organization which bans cigar and pipe smoking in public places. As bad as we filter-draggers are, the odiferous cigar and pipe smoke takes the curse off us.

Well, these things ought to keep me occupied until Tuesday morn. Now, hope for good weather so that, reclining in the back yard we can look skyward and watch for airline near-misses in the Lawrence area, of which there have been four in recent weeks.

DOWN THE YEARS

75 Years Ago — September 1912

An Andover man had a narrow escape from injury Thursday night when the horse which he was driving on the Reading road was struck by a motor cycle coming from Boston. The accident occured close to the turnout near Hidden road, and was witnessed by the passengers of two trolley cars which were passing each other at the time.

A driver of one of George L. Averill's milk wagons had a narrow escape from serious injury Saturday morning, when his team was struck by the 8:45 Haaverhill-Andover car. The wagon was badly smashed and the horse received numerous cuts and bruises. The driver, who jumped when the collision came, escaped uninjured.

The last employee of the Smith and Dove company to benefit by the pension system recently put into operation by the company is William Fortis, who after 47 years of continuous service retired the first of this month.

Beginning with next year, children will not be admitted to town schools unless six years of age on or before the first of January following their admission.

At the opening of school next week, three pupils will be transported from the North School to the Stowe School to lessen the work of the teacher at the North School.

50 Years Ago — September 1937

Punchard High and the Junior high will reopen on Wednesday morning at 8:15, with the grammar schools reopening on Monday morning, September 13.

The local British War Veterans and auxiliary will attend the reception to the crew of HMS York at Robert Burns Hall in Boston tonight. The British Naval and Military Veterans are in charge.

Four Democrats, three Republicans and one Social Justice candidate filed papers for the Congressional election before the deadline on Tuesday.

A gas shovel, four trucks and nine men are working on River road at present in excavating and drainage.

The new oil heating plant at the Bradlee school was inspected on Wednesday night by the school committee. Installed at a cost of around $3600 on a bid secured early this year by the school board, the plant would have cost about $4600 if installed on a summer bid, the contractor stated.

25 Years Ago — September 1962

West Andover residents are deeply disturbed over the industrial zoning of their land, thus taking it out of the residential category.

A detailed statute covering conflicts of interest, obviously in need of interpretation in its affect on Andover, is in the hands of Town Counsel Fredric S. O'Brien. The law sets forth a $3,000 fine and jail term of up to two years for various violations.

The Finance Committee is faced with a decision this week: either authorize the purchase of a new ambulance now, or replace the engine of the 1956 ambulance at a cost of up to $1,500.

Rogers Brook specifications may be advertised as early as September 21, according to representative Arthur

For Those Of Us Who Are Older

By Dorothy Winn

Carl Yastremski, Sr., is among the celebrities scheduled for the first annual Gold Cup Golf Tournament to benefit the Andover Council on Aging. The tournament will be held Monday, Oct. 19, at the Andover Country Club. Shotgun is scheduled for 11 a.m. Tickets cost $125 and include lunch, golf, cart, gifts, awards banquet and more. Proceeds will allow the Council on Aging to purchase Lifeguard units, Meals-on-Wheels equipment and other items to expand programs available to Andover's older residents.

Sponsorship opportunities exist for business, organizations and individuals. Tees, greens, practice green, Lifeguard units and other items are available. Interested parties may call 470-3830 for a sponsorship opportunity form or ticket information. Golfers of all ages are urged to attend.

The senior citizens' lunch program resumes Thursday, Sept. 10, after a brief recess. All Andover residents age 60 and older are eligible to participate. Nutritious meals are served Monday through Friday (except holidays) at 12 noon at the senior center. Meals cost only 50 cents. Reservations must be made by calling 470-3830 by 4 p.m. the business day preceding the lunch you plan to attend.

Transportation to the lunch program, doctor's appointments, shopping, hairdresser and for social and recreational purposes is available to all Andover residents age 60 and older or handicapped residents whose disability has been certified by the transit authority. Weebus rides one way within Andover cost 35 cents. Transportation to Lawrence, Methuen or North Andover is available for $1.25 each way. Reservations must be made 24 hours in advance by calling 975-2747. All Weebus vehicles are lift equipped to accommodate wheelchairs.

Disabled individuals can receive assistance in and out of their homes and onto the vehicle if they register for Andover's Dial-a-Ride transportation program. Wheelchair-bound individuals with walkers, visual impairments or other disabilities requiring transportation may be eligible for this program. Registration forms and additional information is available at the senior center or by calling 470-3830.

All residents and visitors to Andover, regardless of age, may use the free downtown shuttle which travels along Main Street connecting Town Hall, Shawsheen Square, Phillips Academy, elderly housing and the senior center. The shuttle runs Monday through Friday from 7:26 a.m. to 6:16 p.m. Schedules are available at the senior center.

Are you homebound and unable to prepare your own meals? Do you care for an invalid and find yourself worn out from the caregiving? If so, you may be eligible for Meals on Wheels. Nutritious meals are available to Andover residents who are homebound due to medical problems or advanced age. Meals are delivered Monday through Friday at a cost of $1. A doctor's certificate is required. If you have been recently discharged from the hospital, Meals on Wheels are available short-term to help you get back on your feet.

Call 470-3830 for further information on the many programs available through the Andover Council on Aging.

The Andover Haven Associates begin the fall season with the regular meeting on Thursday, Sept. 17, at 1:30 p.m. Richard Durgin will be the speaker. All overnight trips are conducted by Bernie Bresnahan: October 11-14, Browns resort in the Catskills; November 2-9, a Fly and Cruise to the Carribbean; December 4-5, Beacon Motel in White Mountains. Call Doris Hudgins for tickets to a "Holiday Outing" at Danversport Yacht Club on Sunday, Dec. 6.

EUROSTYLE

Today's Eurostyle look in kitchens was introduced to the U.S. some 15 years ago by European manufacturers. It is based on the premise that products must follow the rules of good design rather than relying on applied ornamentation. Good design will stand the test of time. Fad and fashion are scorned by the Eurostyle specialists. A designer's efforts are evaluated according to their suitability and simplicity. This translates into effective space management. Eurostyle kitchens make the most of their storage potential. Yet another aspect of the Eurostyle philosophy is the concentration on a strong, personal design statement. Lastly, Eurostyle relies on quality workmanship for its underpinnings.

For beautiful custom designed cabinetry come to WINDSOR KITCHENS. We have professionally trained designers on our staff to give you what you're looking for in a renovated kitchen. We enjoy the challenge of coming up with new ideas for your most complex design problems. We feature top names in cabinets and appliances. Come to us at 1181 Boston Rd., Ward Hill for the best ideas in kitchens. Wed. 9-6; Thursday 9 to 5:30; Friday 9 to 5:30; Saturday 10 to 2; Sun., Mon., Tues., closed or by appointment. Tel. 372-3444.

The Andover American 12-year-old All Star team lost to Lexington 7-6 ending their bid for the Reading Invitational championship.

Andover made a strong effort in the last inning by scoring three times, but left the tying and winning runs stranded. John Bowman led off with a single, Brian Croteau walked and Eddie Jurdi singled, scoring Bowman. Rodd Malitsky doubled to score Croteau and Mike Sullivan singled home Jurdi with the third run.

Sullivan and Chad Bowman shared the pitching. Hitters were Malitsky (3), Sullivan (2), Bobby Daley, Keith Bilger, John Bowman and Eddie Jurdi.

Malitsky was game MVP and Keith Bilger won a trophy as tournament MVP.

New Swim Team Formed

The Merrimack Valley has a new swim team which will be known as the Merrimack Valley Pirates. The club has received notification of its acceptance in U.S. swimming and will hold all practices and host meets at the Greater Lawrence Technical School pool, 57 River Road, Andover.

According to head coach and Haverhill resident Rick Battistini, the area has long needed a vehicle for competitive age-group swimmers wanting to train on a more intense level than most local teams offer. He states that all too often area residents leave their home town teams and seek a United States swimming program. He and his staff hope to stop this trend by offering this serious program.

The following coaches have been appointed for the 1987-88 short course season: Steve Weisfeldt, Lou Rosenfield, Pam Pelosi and Bob Wentworth, formerly with the Lowell YMCA Marlins; Mark Taffe, formerly with the Haverhill YMCA; and Joshua Willman, formerly head coach at the Andover-North Andover YMCA.

Tryouts for youth ages six to 18 will be held at the Greater Lawrence Technical School pool September 2, 3, 8, 9 and 10 from 5 p.m. to 7 p.m. Members of the coaching staff will be availalbe to answer questions.

Information

Classes begin in September at a campus near you. Class schedules are flexible and you can attend full time or part time. Financial aid is available to eligible students.

You can select from a wide range of academic programs designed to prepare you for a career. Or for advancement in your present job. Or for transfer to a four-year college or university.

You can also choose among more than 300 non- credit courses ranging from gourmet cooking and financial planning to swimming and computer literacy.

To get to our main campus in Haverhill take Exit 52 off Route 495

Great Chowder Championship

The challenge has been made! Who serves the best clam chowder in New England?

The question will soon be answered, when an anticipated 14,000 people cast their votes at the fifth annual Horizons For Youth "Chowdafest," taking place on Boston Common Sept. 20, from noon to 6 p.m.

More than 20 restaurants from throughout Massachusetts are busy increasing their recipes to prepare over 2,000 gallons of chowder as they compete for a grand prize and the "Chowda Champ" title.

Everyone who attends will go from booth to booth tasting the different chowders and then voting for their favorite. There'll be celebrity tasters, and Gene Burns will be broadcasting his WRKO radio show, "Dining Around," live from the event.

The "Chowdafest" will be held, rain or shine, under striped tents amid continuous live entertainment. Admission is $5, $2 dollars for children under 12 and senior citizens.

Proceeds go to Horizons For Youth, a nonprofit organization that provides outdoor and camping programs for disadvantaged, needy, and other boys and girls.

The Horizons for Youth fifth annual "Chowdafest" is sponsored by Bud Light in cooperation with American Legion, Boston Musicians Union, Boston Police Patrolmen's Association, Knights of Columbus, Teamsters Local 25, Coca-Cola of New England and the Massachusetts Restaurant Association.

The first recorded reference to toothaches were found in Sumerian tablets dating back to 2500 B.C. Dental care then involved folk medicine and incantations.

Andover Organ

pipes to the building of the organ's wooden frame is done at the shop by the company's 26 employees.

"There is a small crew of six people that begin the building and take it through to the installation," Olson said, "so it becomes a part of them, an artistic expression."

Sometimes it's even more than that. Brad Rule, an Andover Organ employee, is currently working on an instrument for Trinitarian Congregational Church in North Andover. But Rule won't be seeing the last of the Trinitarian organ once it's installed; he's also the church's organist.

"So if something goes wrong, he can complain to himself," Olson said as he passed Rule's work station.

He stops at the table where Mark Ikerd is shaping the pliable metal around cone forms to make the foot of a pipe. A sliver of metal called a languid will go between the foot and the body of the pipe.

"It turns out to be the same as a dime store whistle," Olson says, as he blows through a finished pipe, which produces a shrill sound, "only a little more expensive."

All the pipes the company makes have to be "voiced" to make sure they're producing the right sound. There's a room on one of the upper floors where workers make the pipes "speak" before setting them in the organ's framework.

Usually, there is one pipe for each note. A constant supply of air goes through a platform called a wind chest that supports the pipes.

To produce sound, the organist has to do two things: draw a stop-knob to send wind from the chest into a set of pipes and push the key that will open a valve to let air into each pipe.

Each group of pipes controlled by the stop-knobs has its own quality and pitch. The pipes are often named after other instruments, like flutes and trumpets, not necessarily because they imitate those instruments, but because of the quality of their sound.

Making an organ, and making it sound right, is an art, according to Robert Reach, Andover Organ's president and tonal director.

"What we are trying to do," Reach said at the inaugural recital of the Cochran Chapel organ in 1981, "is to understand the need for and the use of the organ in general, and the particular needs in a specific situation, and then apply the knowledge of many centuries and several national schools with both skill and artistry to create the most musical, flexible and reliable instrument possible in a particular situation."

Andover Organ has been trying to do that for 39 years. The company was never actually in Andover. It was in Methuen until 1980 when it moved to the Arlington Mills. It was founded in 1948 by Thomas Byers, a physicist, who named it after Andover Institute, a summer organ school at Phillips Academy.

The company was born at the start of the Organ Reform Movement, which brought back into style the mechanical organs of former generations. An electric blower is need to produce the air that goes through the pipes to make sound, but the rest of the organ operates by mechanical action. Twenty-eight years ago, Andover Organ built the first new mechanical action organ in the United States. It belongs to the Redeemer Lutheran Church in Lawrence.

"Organists from all over the country come to see it," Olson said.

The mechanical action organs, Skelton said, "last forever." She said there are organs from the baroque period as old that are still playable. The oldest extant organ is in Sion, Switzerland; it was built in 1390.

Even when his company is repairing an old organ, Olson said, the emphasis is on the past. "The whole idea is more toward preservation and restoration," he said. "Twenty years ago we made a lot more changes. Today, we are more responsive to the original builders. And that's good."

Olson, who majored in organ and church music at St. Olaf in Northfield, Minn., said anyone who knows a keyboard can play the organ and develop an individual technique. But the only real similarity between the organ, piano and harpsichord, he said, is that they all have keyboards.

Skelton, who plays all three, said she "loves them all," but playing the organ is a challenge because you have to learn to coordinate hands and feet.

Skelton, who accompanies choral concerts at Phillips and performs at weddings and services, has played the works of C. M. Widor and Robert Schumann on the chapel's organ, but if you think the pipe organ is a staid and boring old instrument, Skelton once played the '60s hit "You Can't Always Get What You Want" for a school meeting.

"I did grimace," she said.

Adult Courses

Registration for courses in the adult education agricultural division at Essex Agricultural and Technical Institute in Danvers will be held in Berry Hall Monday, Sept. 14, from 7 p.m. to 8:15 p.m.

Courses include herb culture, home vegetable gardening, home grounds landscaping and maintenance, silk flower and dried material design, home lawn care and management, greenhouse management for homeowner, horse management, floral design, maintenance of small air-cooled engines, small fruit culture for home grounds, dog care and grooming, principles and practices of nutrition, quality control and food sanitation, personnel and administration in the food industry, indoor plant culture and backyard poultry.

To obtain a brochure, call or write the school.

Down The Years

Williams.

It's back to school today, for public and parochial school children.

10 Years Ago — September 1977

Dr. Robert A. Walsh, a member of the board of health for over 30 years and its chairman for the past several, has informed Town Manager J. Maynard Austin he is not available for reappointment.

The October town meeting will be asked to appropriate some funds to establish a memorial to Andover men who sacrificed their lives in the Korean conflict and the Vietnam War.

The selectmen this week took action to legalize all town employees who have served since the inception of the town manager charter in 1958.

An Andover couple has filed a $65,000 suit against the town for damages allegedly caused to their home by backed-up sewage.

J. Maynard Austin will be acting town manager as of Friday, and the length of his tenure is in question.

Organ Recital

Linda Lyster will give an organ recital at the Methuen Memorial Music Hall Sept. 2 at 8 p.m.

Her program is as follows: "Sonata in F Major, Wg. 70, No. 3" by C.P.E. Bach; "Simple Gifts" by Wilbur Held; "How Lovely Shines The Morning Star" by Paul Manz; "Prelude on 'Brother James Air' " by Searle Wright; "All Glory be to God on High" by Raymond H. Haan; "Prelude and Fugue in C minor, Op. 37, No. 1" by Felix Mendelssohn; "Two American Folk-Hymn Settings" by Jean Langlais; "meditate on Eternity" (Eight Brittany Songs) by Jean Langlais; "Seven Choral-Poems on the Seven Last Words of Christ" by Charles Tournemire; "Premiere Fantaisie" by Jehan Alain; and "Variations on an Easter Theme" by John Rutter.

Lyster is a graduate of Western Michigan University and Boston University where she studied with Alexander Boggs Ryan and Jack Fisher. She continued her organ study with Jean Langlais in Paris.

Two of the many vehicles ready for your inspection.

North Country Jeep Eagle: Newest AMC-Jeep-Renault Dealer

June 20th, 1987 was opening day for New England's newest AMC-Jeep-Renault dealership and Vice President John Tighe is anxious to inform you that new is the key word. Not only are the new AMC-Jeep-Renault automobiles and trucks available but a new approach to selling and servicing are also found here. No high pressured salesmen. No hard sell tactics. No impersonal mechanics.

North Country Jeep Eagle is building. They are laying the foundation on which to build a reputation for quality products, excellent service and satisfied customers. Customers who will readily recommend North Country Jeep Eagle to their family and friends.

The staff of five salesmen and nine highly trained mechanics invite you to come in today and see the new Jeep Wrangler and Jeep Cherokee. Let them show you Wrangler's on-road character. First, Jeep's Command Trac system lets you shift from 4 wheel drive to economy 2-wheel drive and back again.

A 2.5 litre 4 cylinder engine with electronic fuel injection gives high performance and fuel economy. Choose either the standard 5 speed manual transmission with overdrive or the 4.2 litre I-6 and 3 speed automatic.

Now, step over to the Jeep Cherokee. It's the only vehicle ever to win all 3 major Off-Road magazines "4x4 of the Year" award in its year of introduction. With its longer wheel base 3 across rear seating gives you 5 passenger capacity. With the rear seat folded, there's 71.5 cubic feet of cargo space and Cherokee offers two 4-wheel drive systems.

Take Rt. 93 North to exit 47. North Country Jeep Eagle is located at 175 Pelham St. Methuen. Let Sales Manager Dick Martin introduce you to what's new in North Country. Tel. 681-1115. Sales Dept. open M-F 9-9,Sat. 9-5, Sun. 12-4

Madison Hill Upholsterers:

Master Craftsmen

Where do the professional furniture dealers go to have fabric changed or modification made on chairs or couches? Who do the engineers at AT&T or Bell Labs call when it's time to have a hundred or two chairs recovered? Madison Hill Upholsterers.

John Camasso, and staff are ready to take on any job, large or small. One of their specialties is creating usable antiques. No longer will you only look at that lovely piece occupying the corner of the room. After Madison Hill Upholsterers have finished re-glueing, re-inforcing, re-finishing and re-upholstering, that antique chair becomes a usable piece of furniture.

Remember, between John and his staff, there are 157 combined years of experience. The youngest "apprentice" has 25 years alone. Your furniture is in the extremely capable hands of craftsmen using up-to-date air tools and lock stitch sewing machines.

Each piece is painstakingly worked on at a low pace to assure you of detailed, old fashioned, quality work. There are no speedy assemble lines here.

Call Madison Hill Upholsterers at 686-7264 today. Their decorator will come to your home for consultation, fabric selections and a free estimate. Located at 300 Canal St. Lawrence. Open Mon. thru Thurs. 9-5, Fri. 9-3:30.

Attendance

this is the best way to do it." But, the committeman added, "it's up to (Richardson) and the high school administration to make the policy work, and I'm not going to second-guess you at this point."

Tilghman made a motion to approve the high school attendance policy, and to incorporate the certain sections, including the 5-day failure rule, the after-eight tardy policy, and more stringent requirements for student dismissals, as part of the school committee's attendance policy for all grade levels.

Also included in the all-school policy is a section requiring parental notification by the school when the student is determined to be in danger of failing because of poor attendance.

The motion passed, 3-1, with Neal dissenting. "I am bothered by the section of the policy that states students 'automatically' fail," he commented, adding he would like to see figures presented following Term 1 showing how many students failed school on the basis of the attendance policy.

"I appreciate the intent of the policy," Neal stressed, "but I'm not comfortable with it." As an example, Neal referred to the hypothetical case of a student who "gets the flu and is out for three days, but doesn't need to see a doctor, then gets the flu again. Does he fail 'automatically?'"

Richardson responded that students and parents have the right to appeal in such a situation.

In a related matter, Robb elaborated on his desire to see a process established in Andover schools for the hearing of student grievances. "We have a formal grievance procedure for employees, and one for administrators and teachers. The only group not protected is the students."

While he "does not believe students rights are being trampled on," students should reserve the same rights and responsibilities as other citizens. Robb noted students are responsible for levels of competence and exemplary attendance, and they should receive reciprocal consideration if they believe "things aren't running well."

Under Robb's proposal, students who have a complaint about inconsistent or unfair rule enforcement would seek redress from a "Grievance Committee" consisting of students, teachers, parents and administration.

"This would be an impartial group to which a student could take a complaint for a ruling."

Such a setup would also assist groups of students in what Robb termed "class-action suit types of things." If for example, the students feel the quality of their education has suffered because of a condition at the school, they may take their complaint to the grievance board.

"Students should feel they have a place to go," Robb stated, "they should be able to feel the system is working for them."

Birnbach supported this proposal as "a great idea," and suggested the new student representative to the school committee could work on the issue.

Dr. Kenneth Seifert, superintendent of schools, was also in favor of a "Grievance Committee," though he said he'd "like to see a nicer name for it."

"It's important to be able to say "I feel there's something wrong," Seifert said, "and to be able to take issue when there is something wrong. Wouldn't it be nice," he quipped, "to have someone ask 'What do you think?', and be able to tell them honestly."

Responsibilities

programs are underway at both elementary and secondary levels, and computers have arrived in the school buildings.

Haslam's list of goals, also presented to the committee Tuesday, contains six major priorities, including the Computer Plan.

Also on Haslam's checklist is a comprehensive curriculum development program in both Language Arts/English and in Science, based on work begun last year. "While no funds have been allocated to continue the curriculum revisions," she told the committee, "we have made a clear start, and assessments can be made."

Another priority is student competencies, specifically among secondary school students in grades 6, 8 and 10. Analysis of these competencies will help determine what curriculum programs need to be addressed.

Birnbach commented on student competencies, saying "there are certain things kids at these grade levels should be aware of." Dr. Kenneth Seifert, superintendent of schools, said one method of testing student competencies would be through oral presentations by students on a specific area of their study during the academic year.

Haslam noted Andover's expectations for students involve "higher-order thinking assessments," meaning an emphasis on critical thinking and knowledge applications, rendering standardized "knowledge and comprehension" tests ineffective in the system. She mentioned the oral presentation method as one possibility for student competency testing.

Other priorities mentioned by Haslam are the design and implementation of an evaluation/supervision plan for staff and administration, and an assistance role to Seifert with his new Planning and Implementation Committee.

Haslam will also oversee special "instructional strategies initiatives," most notably the Paideia seminars initiative. "Additional books have been purchased for this year, and advanced training for teachers will take place," she said. Haslam also announced a $4,000 Exxon grant had been made to Andover for the continuation of the Paideia program, and that two teachers and two administrators would be selected for an advanced training seminar at St. John's University in Maryland on November 4.

Haslam's list of goals targets "increased student/teacher participation in Paideia seminars" as a priority for this year. In addition, Haslam said she will also supervise selected pilot projects, both system-wide and within individual schools. "I expect to hear from principals on pilot projects at their schools," she added, "with a finalized list by September 30."

To further these goals, staff development is needed. Educator training programs include inservice work, outside courses, workshops, research projects and the aforementioned pilot projects, as well as release days to allow further discussion of curriculum planning and student competencies, as well as time for parent-teacher conferences.

Haslam emphasizes three components to outstanding staff development. The first is the individual component, "to ensure that all teachers and administrators are continually enhancing individual knowledge and skill."

Secondly, the collective component, which "unites staffs in school-based improvement."

And finally, the system component, which serves to "provide consistent curriculum and instruction throughout the system."

The first father and son to serve at the same time in the U.S. Senate were Henry Dodge of Wisconsin and his son, Augustus Caesar Dodge of Iowa. They served from 1848 to 1855.

Giant Glass Co. Inc.: Brighten Your Life

We have all had it happen at least once in our on-the-road experiences! You're driving along on your way to work, listening to the music on the radio, when suddenly out of the corner of your eye you see something.....A split second later, a thump and crackling sound. Then, you realize what has happened.

Your windshield has been shattered by a stone that has tumbled off the dump truck in front of you.Got the feeling the rest of the day is going to head down hill at record speed?

Wrong! Not if you call Giant Glass Co., Inc. at 688-8211. They have a fleet of twelve trucks, manned by experienced technicians who are capable of replacing that shattered windshield, on-sight, at your home or office.

Simply by dialing a phone, your worries are over. Giant Glass Co., Inc. is approved by all major insurance companies and are the primary installer for the insurance industry. They deal directly with your insurance.Ten years ago, owners Dennis Drinkwater and Lance Cramer opened Giant Glass Co., Inc. Today, they are the largest replacement glass installers north of Boston, with offices in Lawrence and Chelsea.

General Manager Guy Strazzere further explained that Giant Glass Co. also installs store fronts of thermopane or plexiglass, commercial and industrial; residential tub enclosures, interior applications, custom mirrors, furniture tops and repair of stormsashes, storm doors and windows. Giant Glass Co. also installs and repairs sunroofs on foreign and domestic cars, vans and trucks.

So, when you have a glass problem, turn to the Giant. Giant Glass Co., Inc., 598 Essex St., Lawrence or telephone 688-8211 or 1-800-892-0270. Open M-F 8-5, Sat. 8-12.

Healthy Drinking

Summertime...and the livin' is easy. But it's also often hot and humid, and a time when we're probably drinking a lot more liquids than usual.

That can be good, both as a means of beating summer heat and of providing good nutrition. And a wise selection of summer drinks can make your summer beverage selection much more healthful. A new "Guide to Beverages" from the American Institute for Cancer Research can help provide basic nutritional information to aid in your selection of summer refreshments.

Recent studies on diet and cancer have led to estimates that as many as 35 percent of cancers may be directly linked to our diets. By choosing foods and beverages that are low in fat and higher in important nutrients, we can help reduce the cancer risk we face.

The "Guide to Beverages" slide chart from the American Institute for Cancer Research provides nutritional information for more than 150 different beverages, ranging from fruit juices to carbonated soda to alcoholic drinks. Also included is information on milk, tea, coffee, brand name and generic drinks. For each beverage this handy slide chart provides nutritional information on calories, sodium content and vitamin content for vitamins C and A, two vitamins which studies have linked to lower cancer risk.

The "Guide to Beverages" slide chart is available by writing to the American Institute for Cancer Research, Dept. BG, Washington, D. C. 20069.

Docket No. 87P2167-E1

Estate of Julius Stern late of Andover in the County of Essex.

NOTICE

A petition has been presented in the above-captioned matter praying that a certain instrument be probated purporting to be the last will and codicil of said deceased by Herta M. Stern of Andover in the County of Essex, praying that she be appointed executrix thereof.

If you desire to object to the allowance of said petition, you or your attorney should file a written appearance in said Court at Salem on or before 10:00 in the forenoon on September 21, 1987.

In addition you should file a written statement of objections to the petition, giving specific grounds therefore, within thirty(30) days after the return day (or such other time as the Court, on motion with notice to the petitioner, may allow) in accordance with Probate Rule 2A.

Witness, Thaddeus Buczko, Esquire, First Justice of said Court at Salem, the eighteenth day of August in the year of our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eighty-seven.

WORK OR NOT WE'LL PAY YOU!

I don't really care whether or not you work. I need someone who can periodically see that our well behaved 5 year old daughter gets to day care and back on those few days a month when my wife must travel. Often only one way transportation is required. Sometimes you'll be asked to care for her for an hour or two, but for the most part it is not hard work and won't involve long hours. We'll pay you and even guarantee $35.00 per week whether or not we use your services. Sometimes we may ask you to spend the night, so you will not have an early morning trip. We will work with you, but you must work with us.

Top references and a reliable car and a love for children are essential.

REACHING THE RIGHT BUYERS

It's true that today is a great time to sell your home. Financing is affordable and buyers are out in droves. Unfortunately, many sellers mistakenly assume that the difficulty in finding the RIGHT buyer for your home has decreased as dramatically as the outer-space interest rates. No so. If you try to sell your home yourself today, you still must face plenty of difficulties. One of them is attracting the right people.

Can you weed out "Lookers"? It takes a seasoned professional eye to spot the truly interested and qualified parties. If you don't have one, you'll find yourself wasting a lot of time on people who are no more househunting than they are deep-sea fishing. They're just passing the time because -unlike you - they don't have anything better to do. Today's seller's market has brought them out in force. If you sell through a Realtor, you can be sure that the prospects he or she will bring will be really in the market for a home.

If there is anything we can do to help you in the field of real estate, please phone or drop in at THE HOWE AGENCY, 4 Pouchard Ave., Andover. Phone: 475-5100. We're here to help.

REAL ESTATE GUIDELINES

By Robert Bryan
Realty U.S.A.
Schruender Real Estate

STRUCTURAL INSPECTIONS

If you have a house for sale, your buyers will probably include a contingency in the contract asking for some time to get a structural inspection. They will hire an expert to look at the way the house is built and to check out the major systems and any appliances that convey.

A professional structural inspector will help your buyers get to know your house and feel comfortable with it. It's not an inspection that results in a pass or fail grade. The buyers will learn important things about the house. How do they find the water cut-off valve in an emergency? Are there any cost-effective energy conservation investments they might want to make after settlement? How should they set up a budget for repairs over the next ten years? Buyers rarely back out of a sale after a structural. Even if there are problems, you have an opportunity to negotiate a compromise early in the transaction, helping to avoid problems that could threaten the sale if discovered later on.

If there's a move in your future, call the professionals at Realty USA / Schruender Real Estate. The real estate that is ready to serve you. Call us at 685-5000 or drop by our offices at 73 Chickering Road, North Andover.

Selectmen, Housing Committee Reach Accord On Goals

By Lewis C. Howe

Confusion and confrontation have marred the first few months of operation for the Andover Housing Partnership Committee (AHPC), but an accord finalized by the selectmen August 24 should lead to smoother sailing.

Selectmen Chairman Gerald Silverman spoke for the board when he said "finally, we have some agreement after about a month and a half."

Silverman was referring to the covenant between the selectmen and the AHPC that clearly defines the goals and responsibilities of the volunteer affordable housing group.

Representatives of both groups met August 20 to negotiate the pact, which gives the AHPC authority to comment on previously filed affordable housing projects as part of the town's communique to the state on said projects.

The agreement also establishes procedural guidelines for town-initiated and developer-initiated proposals.

Under the new policy, any developer wishing to build affordable housing in Andover should be placed on the AHPC's agenda as the first step in the review process.

The committee will have power of negotiation with developers concerning any changes in the proposal the AHPC deems unacceptable.

Once the affordable housing group and the developer agree to terms, the proposal will be sent to other town boards for review.

The AHPC will be charged with filling out a funding application with the developer and writing a funding recommendation to the selectmen.

Selectman will have final authority on what is sent to the state, the agreement states, but they should communicate changes in the AHPC's recommendation with the committee before forwarding the package to the commonwealth.

Should the developer and the AHPC not reach a settlement on a particular proposal, the project will be considered "unfriendly" and no letter of approval will be sent to the state. Further, the AHPC will notify the state the developer has been uncooperative with the town and may, the covenant reads, "ask that his funding application be denied."

Conversely, the housing committee also has the right to initiate its own affordable housing proposals on "any parcels of land so designated by Town Meeting."

The AHPC may then decide on a developer to implement the proposal, and recommend the project to selectmen. If the selectmen approve the proposal, it would then be reviewed by other town boards, and the AHPC would co-author a funding recommendation with the chosen developer. Again, the selectmen retain final authority concerning what is sent to the state.

Under the agreement, the Board of Selectmen also reserve the right to override the AHPC's suggested developer, provided the housing committee is consulted first.

Another rift between the town and the AHPC was mended when selectman Gail Ralston announced at Monday's meeting a letter would be sent to the Massachusetts housing office stating the town has not approved the Dundee Park, Abbot's Pond, Riverview Commons and Ballard View comprehensive permit proposals. Members of the AHPC had argued cover letters sent by town officials to the state had implied local support for the projects, a position supported by Joseph Flatley, Director of the Massachusetts Housing Partnership (MHP).

"I would hope this clarifies the concerns some people in town have had," Ralston commented. "We will also alert the state that the AHPC may wish to make other comments on the proposals," she added.

Town Manager Kenneth Mahony said he would "hand-deliver" the letter to state officials.

Good Neighbors

Customers of Massachusetts Electric Company contributed nearly $150,000 to help needy families around the Commonwealth pay their heating bills this past winter.

In total, 14,617 Mass. Electric customers participated in the "Good Neighbor Energy Fund," sponsored by the Salvation Army and energy companies in Masachusetts.

Mass. Electric matched every $2 donation from a customer with $1, up to $50,000.

The company is beginning to plan now for the third season of the "Good Neighbor Energy Fund" scheduled to begin in November. Applications will be available at local Salvation Army offices in late fall.

Ringing in the new year

By Lewis C. Howe

The opening of the 1987-88 school year brings with it a host of challenging programs designed to better educate Andover public school students, according to Lois Haslam, assistant superintendent for Curriculum and Instruction.

Heading the list of new initiatives is the Computer Plan, which Haslam said is "going along very well" thus far. As of this week, elementary school teachers were beginning staff training for Logo functions, and secondary school instructors were themselves being instructed in Appleworks in order to pass the knowledge on to their students when school opens next Thursday.

"The teachers have been extremely enthusiastic" to learn computers, Haslam commented. She added the necessary computer hardware has already been installed and is ready to go.

The upcoming academic year will also be the second year of Paidea reading seminars, wherein students meet with teachers to discuss classic books. "Some teachers have had inservice training in leading Paidea seminars," the assistant superintendent noted, and those involved in the program last year will continue their work during 1987-88.

Administrative goals for this year include a study of student competencies, with a focus on grades 6, 8 and 10. There is no single reason to examine these particular grade levels, Haslam said. "They are simply three checkpoints along the road to a complete education."

Lois Haslam
assistant superintendent
for Curriculum and Instruction

1987-88 is also the second year of a five-year Curriculum and Instruction plan for language arts/English and science, Haslam noted. Detailed study of these areas will be made in order to judge the quality of present curriculum, and to make recommendations for future programs.

CHILDREN OUTGROW GLASSES, TOO

You expect children to outgrow their shoes and shirts — but do you realize they are twice as likely to outgrow their glasses?

It's a fact. Their eyewear prescriptions usually change during these growing years. Always, though, their faces change, requiring changes in eyeglasses and contact lenses.

When no prescription change is needed, and the eyewear gets too small, if there's any way the useful life of your child's eyewear can be extended, a Guild Optician can do it for you. Or he can help you select new eyewear that reflects the changing lifestyle of your child. Come in to see us!

Elementary kids learn to spell ~~write~~ right

By Lewis C. Howe

A new program designed to enhance spelling skills will be introduced as part of the language arts curriculum in Andover's elementary schools this fall.

"We took a survey last September in which we asked what part of the language arts curriculum needed improvement, and spelling was mentioned the most often" explained Terry Murphy, program adviser for the Andover Integrated Spelling Program (AISP).

The new system, Murphy said, is based on research showing "3,000 words in the English language that constitute 97.6 percent of adult writing." By focusing on these 3,000 "high frequency" words, children will be able to master a fair amount of the spelling skills they will need as adults.

Each week, students in grades one through six will receive a 25-word spelling list taken from the 3,000-word master list. Pretests of words will be held on Mondays, when the teacher will pronounce the words, and the students will write them down. The students, as part of their learning, will correct the pretests themselves.

"Research shows students learn better when they proofread and correct their own pretests" Murphy commented. By correcting their mistakes, and then seeing the words properly spelled out in front of them, children learn the correct spellings faster, she noted. Students will also learn valuable proofreading skills through use of the system, Murphy added.

Exercises, developed and written by Andover teachers, will encourage children to study the words misspelled on the pretests. These exercises are to be done for homework. "Students only need to study the words they don't already know," Murphy said.

The system also instructs students in study skills with a seven-step process for learning. To master a difficult word, the student should first pronounce the word carefully and speak the letters in sequence. Then, the child should attempt to spell the word in his head, and then write the word down, checking to see if the spelling is correct. This process is repeated until the student spells the word correctly.

Post-tests on the words will be given each Friday, and every fourth week will be a review of the previous material. There will be 32 lessons in all.

The spelling program will also be integrated with other Andover Integrated Reading System (AIRS) components, Murphy stated. Spelling will be studied in relation to capitalization and punctuation, rules of grammar and penmanship. "Handwriting is tied into this," she remarked, "because many spelling problems may actually turn out to be penmanship problems."

Working in harmony with the already-successful capitalization and punctuation programs, Murphy believes Andover students will become well-versed in spelling.

Results of the new spelling system will be assessed this year, as part of the administration's goal to extensively examine student competencies.

The spelling committee was formed last year to devise a workable program for spelling instruction in Andover elementary schools. The committee consists of Language Arts teachers and Instructional Specialists, including Mary Lou Shea, Betty Ann Coyle, Nancy Smith, Barbara Keenan, Charlotte Lynch and Irene Crane.

Keenan, along with teaching colleagues Christine Maynard, Linda Lansbury, Diane Stefanelli, Linda Look, Ruth Gosselin, Peg Orlando and June Blake, created the new spelling exercises.

Teacher shortage expected in '91

The state is expected to maintain an adequate supply of teachers through 1991. After then, there will be a shortage, according to the Massachusetts Department of Education.

The department said that the shortage of teachers after 1991 could result from the combination of increasing student enrollments, probable attrition of the teaching workforce and predicted limits on drawing from the reserve pool of teachers.

The potential shortfall will represent the difference between the number of teachers who will be needed to maintain current prevailing student-to-teacher ratios and the number who will be available.

The Department of Education said a review of teacher supply and demand by certification categories reveals:

- an area that has current and chronic likely shortages is bilingual education;
- areas that now have surpluses but will have shortages by the early 1990s are English, general sciences, mathematics, biology, chemistry, social studies and vocational studies;
- areas unlikely to experience either shortages or surpluses of any great magnitude are early childhood education and elementary and middle-school education;
- areas likely to have no future shortages but which will have some near-term, modest surpluses are French, Spanish and other languages.

Teachers

The information emerged from a study prepared for the Massachusetts Department of Education, the state's Board of Regents of Higher Education, the Massachusetts Higher Education Assistance Corporation and the University of Massachusetts President's Office.

Other findings in the study:

- Total school enrollments in Massachusetts peaked in 1974 at 1,183,028 students and are expected to decline by 31.6 percent through 1990, amounting then to only 809,402 students. Beyond this point, total enrollments will rise through 1995.
- A depression in enrollments that is now moving through the system implies there will be situations in the 1990s in which too few teachers will be produced by colleges to match the already swelling primary and secondary enrollments.
- Because enrollments will vary according to geographic location there will be teacher shortages in some places at times when other places have sufficient supply.
- The teaching workforce in Massachusetts has fallen from a peak of 73,559 in 1977 to 62,225 in 1986 (including vocational teachers).
- data provided by those higher-education programs that reported results indicate that the percentage of minority teacher graduates fell from 13 percent to 6 percent between 1982 and 1986, following a national trend.
- While enrollments of white public school students in the Commonwealth fell by 23.7 percent from 1979 to 1985, enrollments of minorities rose by 7.4 percent. The number of Asian students doubled and the number of Hispanic students increased nearly 45 percent in this period. The percentage of minority students enrolled in the Commonwealth has increased from less than 12 percent in 1979 to almost 16 percent in 1985.
- In some teaching fields the numbers of teachers may fall even further because of declining numbers of students.

Andover elementary students give outstanding performance on state test

By Lewis C. Howe

Andover elementary school students scored well above average on a Massachusetts Department of Education basic skills test administered statewide to third and sixth graders.

The test, designed to measure student progress, is comprised of reading, math and writing sections. Results show 97 percent of Andover's 240 sixth graders passed every section of the exam. A success rate of 95 percent is considered a high proportion, according to the Department of Education.

The stellar performance of Andover's schoolchildren "is a clear reflection on the high standards of education in Andover and the fine curriculum programs here," said Eileen Woods, principal of the Sanborn School.

Jack Coyle, principal of West Elementary, said a combination of strong curriculum, highly-qualified teachers and capable students "helped us get to the top of the scale."

Andover's high educational standards, both among educators and parents, contribute to outstanding academic performance, Coyle stated. He cited comprehensive language arts programs at the elementary level as an example of the town's commitment to learning. "Other communities' subject matter generally is not as well integrated," Coyle explained. "In Andover, reading, writing and structural skills are all interrelated in our programs."

Family background has a lot to do with high test scores, Coyle continued. "Parents are interested in how their kids are doing in school," he said. "The majority of parents want their children to go on to college."

"If you go into homes in Andover," Coyle remarked, "you generally find good books, home computers and other tools for learning. In other towns, you're sometimes lucky to find a book."

Nancy Smith, Instructional Specialist at Sanborn, agreed parental involvement in schools is "intense." Parents have high expectationsfor their offspring, and are "involved every day" to ensure quality education.

Coyle believes theacademic emphasis stems from the "professional, college-educated background" of many Andover parents. "We are definitely a different kind of community in terms of education," he com-

Educators advise against formal preschools

As a record number of American 4-year-olds head off to school this fall, the National Association for the Education of Young Children (NAEYC) is advising against placing too much emphasis on academic instruction in pre-schools.

"This year, for the first time, approximately half of the country's 4-year-olds will be enrolled in pre-school - that's a jump from 43 percent who were enrolled just four years ago," says Dr. David Elkind, NAEYC president. "Pre-school can be a wonderfully enriching experience when the program is specifically geared to this age group. Unfortunately, an increasing number of little children are being 'taught' as though they were in first or second grade, and that is totally inappropriate."

During the pre-school years, Elking notes, teachers should focus on helping children learn how to learn - how to pay attention, how to follow instructions, how to get along with other children, etc.

"At this age, children lack the social and mental development needed to profit from formal academic instruction. A heavy emphasis on it frustrates the child and weakens his curiosity and natural excitement for learning. Moreover, it consumes valuable hours when a child should be learning the skills that will permit him to be successful at home, at school and with friends," Elkind says.

Elkind gives these examples of teaching practices which are appropriate for preschoolers and which parents should look for in selectng an early childhood program, whether pre-school, nursery school or kindergarten:

- When there is little, if any, use of ditto sheets, flashcards and other rote-teaching materials. "At this age, children learn best by hands-on activities," Elkind says. "They will more quickly learn about 'three,' for instance, by handing out three cupcakes to friends than by coloring in three balloons on a ditto sheet."
- When the teacher talks mostly to children individually rather than to the class as a whole.
- When children are allowed to select their activities from a variety of ares - like blocks, music, art, puzzles, etc. - rather than when the teacher initiates and directs all classroom activity.
- When vigorous outdoor activity is recognized as a valuable part of the child's learning experience, rather than as worthless play that interferes with instructional time.
- When children have ample opportunity to interact with other children in ways that help them learn to co-operate, negotiate, help and solve problems rather than when they spend most of their time working individually at desks or tables.

Elkin said that parents may obtain more detailed information on what to look for in a preschool by requesting NAEYC's free brochure, "Good Teaching Practices for 4 and 5-Year-Olds." Interested parents can write the NAEYC at 1834 Connecticut Ave. NW, Washington, D.C. 20009, and enclose a business-sized self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Parents group releases guide to school success

The Andover Secondary Parents Group has issued a series of guidelines to assist both parents and students in their quest for a quality education.

Parents of secondary school students are advised to remember that "kids are the number one priority." Parents, the group's credo lists, should "recognize and remember that your child's primary job is school."

The organization urges parents to insist on good school attendance, proper dress and a state of preparedness for school. Parents should make themselves available to their children, the school and its teachers, and take time to attend school events.

The parents' responsibilities also include attaining knowledge of the child's academic and social life. The following are some do's and don'ts for parents.

Parents should find out what's going on in your child's school building, and know their child's course schedule and teachers.

They should be familiar with curriculum and instruction methods. This can be accomplished by visiting classes, networking with teachers and guidance and contacting the appropriate personnel if there are concerns.

Parents should also compliment the teachers, avoid "coffee/k-latch rumors" and hear all sides of an issue before passing judgement.

The parents' group also recommends getting to know your child's friends, interacting with other parents, set reasonable limits for your child's behavior, and to not be afraid to say "no" to your child.

Finally, parents should expect no more from their child than he/she can give.

Students are instructed to do their part as well in a twelve-point list of responsibilities.

Some of the guidelines are academically-based, such as prompt and regular attendance, following school rules and class participation. Others are more human-oriented, asking students to "show honesty and integrity," "demonstrate respect and caring for yourself, other students and teachers," and "take pride in your school and yourself."

School will soon be in session, please drive with extra care.

Best Wishes, Students, for a Successful School Year.

Principal promotes adjustment program in state

The Freshman Adjustment Program that he instituted for first-year students at Dennis-Yarmouth Regional High School could become standard fare for other Massachusetts and New England high schools if Charles T. Orloff has his way.

The principal of the Mattacheese Middle School in South Yarmouth, Orloff has been granted a full sabbatical by the Dennis-Yarmouth School Committee to spread the word about the success of the local program in helping students make the transition from middle- to high-school academic life.

Orloff was selected as a Commonwealth Leadership Academy Fellow earlier this year by the State Board of Education. He was one of four educators honored in the second year of the program, which is mandated by Chapter 188, the School Improvement Act of 1985.

The academy was established to provided training in the development of management skills for principals and other supervisory personnel. There have been seven Fellows to date. Fellows advise school personnel in their individual areas of expertise.

Orloff hopes to discover a number of beneficial approaches to the adjustment problem in his year-long study.

"Students are having considerable difficulty making the transition from the eighth to ninth grade," he aid. It is a transition that often proves traumatic. In his opinion, "middle schools tend to be patterned more on elementary schools; they are much more self-contained and insulated. Students go from a homogeneous setting to a totally tracked system and, quite often, these students are not ready for the sudden mastery of study skills. They simply don't know how to adjust."

> 'We help ease them into the process, help to familiarize them with the setting and let them know that the transition can be effected smoothly through a sense of awareness of what has and what will transpire. It's a heightened form of orientation.'
> Charles Orloff, Mattacheese Middle School principal

In the Dennis-Yarmouth system, incoming freshmen begin their high school studies a day earlier than other students. "We help ease them into the process, help to familiarize them with the setting and let them know that the transition can be effected smoothly through a sense of awareness of what has and what will transpire. It's a heightened form of orientation."

Orloff will tour throughout Massachusetts to explain the Dennis-Yarmouth transition approach and learn about other successful ways of coping and report his findings to the state board of education when his study is completed. He will also serve, he said, as a lobbyist of sorts. "I hope to point out to our state legislative leaders how important the work of the fellowship program can be."

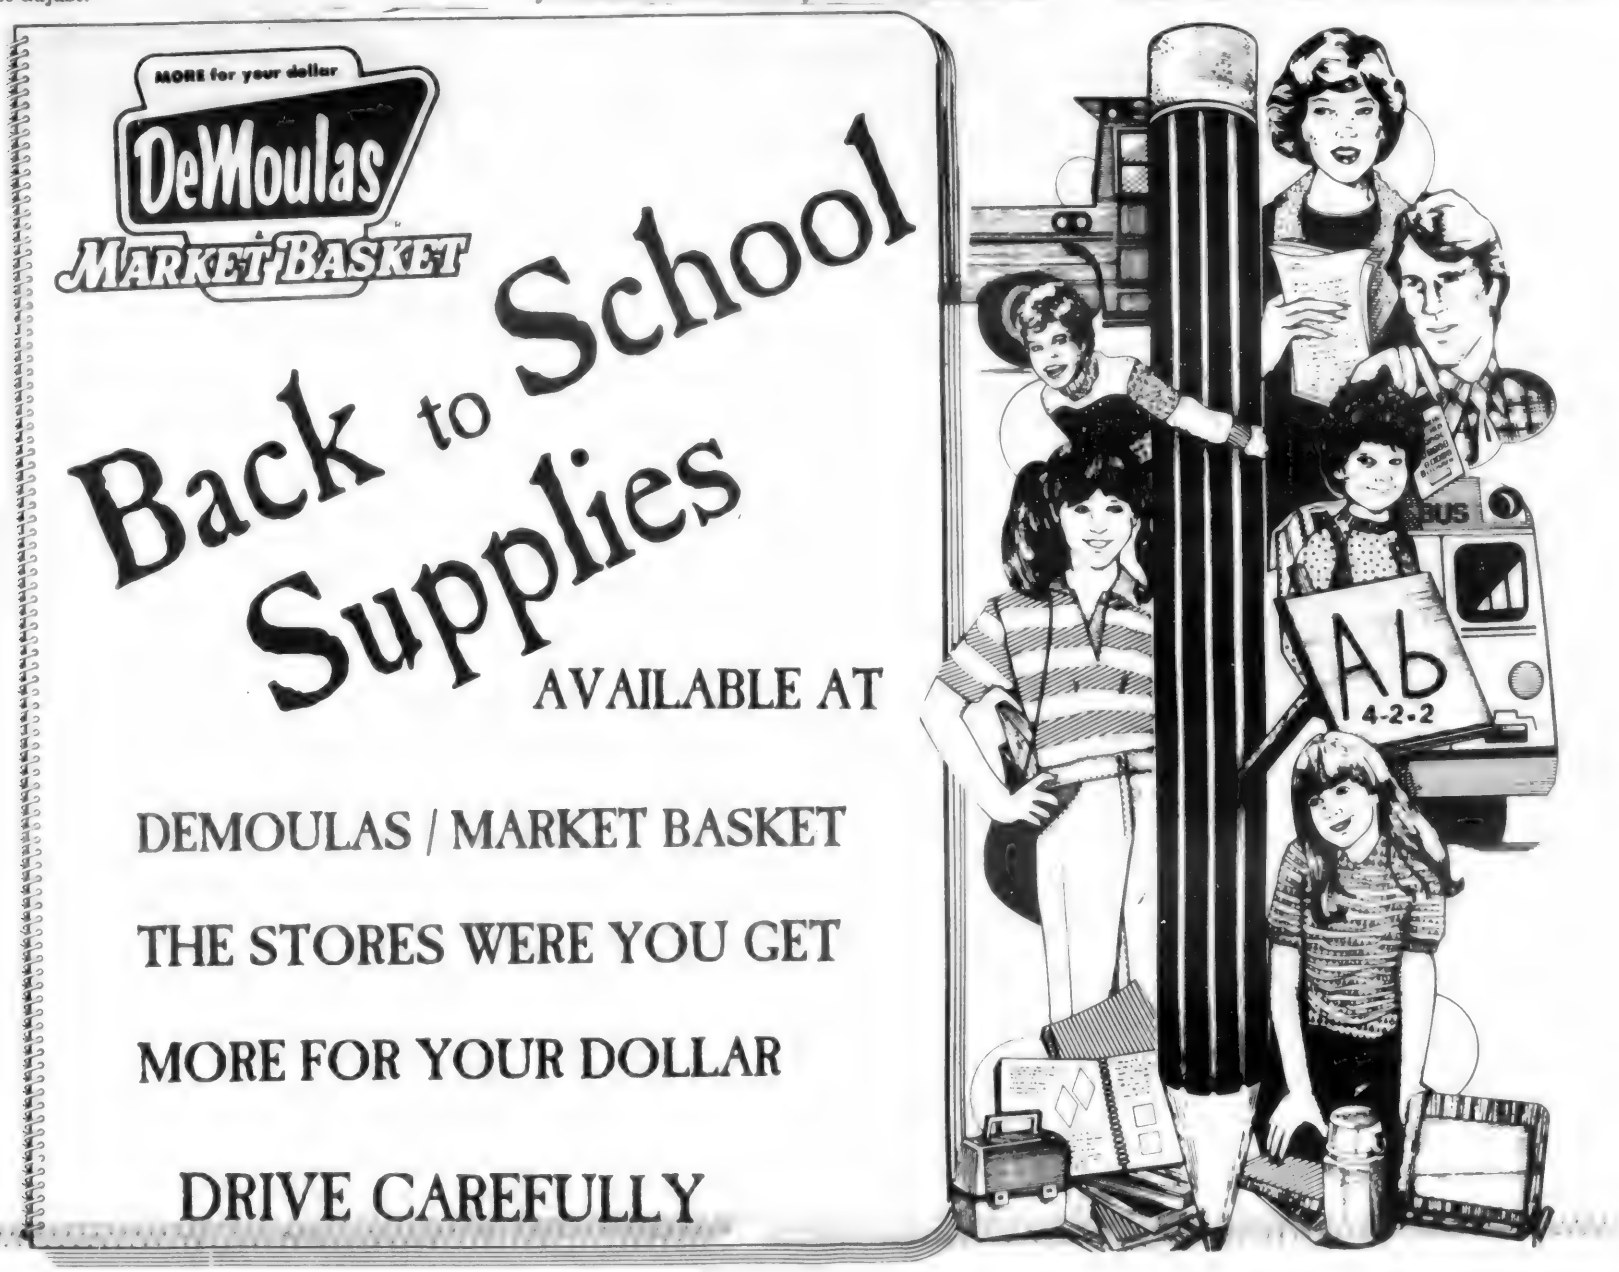
To date, he is the only Fellow granted a sabbatical by a Massachusetts school system to further his studies. "Our goal is to have the legislative fully fund the program so that the three or four Fellows annually selected under the program can devote full time to it.

Orloff was named one of four Fellows at the April meeting of the Massachusetts Board of Education. The others: Judith N. Hunt, principal of the elementary and middle school in Princeton; Norman C. Najimy, principal of the Richmond Consolidated School, which is part of the Mount Graylock School Union; and Mary L. Sapienza, head of the mathematics department at Newton North High School for the past 20 years.

Sapienza is also a site teacher at the Harvard Educational Technology Center Laboratory, responsible for curriculum development evaluation and staff development. As a Fellow, she will focus on curriculum by visiting schools and talking with administrators and teachers who have clearly stated curriculum goals that are reflected in a student's learning.

Najimy will study the technological, economic and societal changes educators must prepare to meet. He plans to interview educators, economists and technologists and develop and report on model school programs that could help students prepare for the future. Najimy formerly worked in the Pittsfield public schools as teacher, counselor, department head, elementary school principal and director of English.

For her fellowship project, Hunt will focus on alternative kindergarten programming. She plans to identify exemplary early childhood programs and help communities that are interested in developing such programs. A former director of the special needs collaborative in Gardner and head of a learning disabilities program in Westminster, she coordinates special education and psychological services in addition to being budget manager for the Princeton schools.



Putting the 'public' in public education

Citizen involvement in the educational planning and decision-making process in Bay State schools has reached an all-time high, according to State Education Commissioner Harold Raynolds, Jr.

In Framingham, for example, the public schools are working collaboratively with the courts, probation officers, police, parents and community agencies to resolve the problem of student delinquent behavior. "This is community education at its best," according to Raynolds.

The commissioner said community involvement is key to the success of this endeavor. Other key ingredients include maximum use of community resources to enhance curriculum and instruction and collaboration and cooperation between schools and other community agencies in meeting the educational needs of the community.

Raynolds defined community education as "an approach to educational decision-making and resource-coordination that encourages a community to assume more responsiblity for educating itself." It is a way of "doing business" that involves the community in the planning and delivery of educational programs. Some of the more successful programs involve parent advisory councils, public forums, school-community planning teams and student advisory committees.

Community resources are brought into the schools through a number of programs like mentorships where students with special interests or talents are paired with community members with special skills or resources. Senior community members share their historical knowledge and perspective through oral history projects in a number of locations.

Raynolds said community education has served as a catalyst to promote binding ties between mental health agencies, senior citizen centers, recreation programs, youth commissions, health care centers and other local organizations.

"Community education builds public support for education, provides a cost effective means for improving curriculum and instruction and creates cooperative relationships between the home, school and community," Raynolds said.

In Cambridge, the Cambridge School Volunteers, Inc. now comprises some 350 volunteers serving 5,500 to 6,000 students. Volunteers are recruited from a broad spectrum of the community and are used in a number of endeavors.

"Volunteers man special resource needs rooms on occasion and are paired as Big Brothers or Big Sisters with students experiencing adjustment problems. During the past year, a significant number of volunteer tutors were available through the system's tutoring center. Volunteers also came forth to serve in the Cambridge school department's recently established literacy centers for the primary grades in five of the city's schools," Raynolds said.

Other examples of community education in action: in Somerset, students reinforced classroom learning about local governments by participating in the governing process. Students ran for elected town positions and took the place of town officials on Somerset Government Day. After incidents of sexual assault on students in Quincy, a nationally-recognized child assault prevention program was added to the curriculum so students could recognize and address potentially dangerous situations. Raynolds predicted the number of community education efforts in Massachusetts and nationwide will continue to grow.

Smith said the basic skills test was given to every third, sixth and ninth grade student in the state. The writing section consisted of a single essay, with the reading and math sections multiple choice. Ninth-grade test scores were not available at press time.

The Basic Skills Test was administered last October, with the following results.

At the third grade level, 98 percent of Sanborn students scored above the required 70 percent to pass the test. All 53 children passed the math and writing sections.

At South Elementary, 67 students took the three-part examination, with 100 percent passing the reading section, 99 percent the math portion, and 96 percent the writing test.

Figures for third graders at Bancroft Elementary were equally impressive. One hundred percent of the 94 children given the reading and math tests passed, with 96 percent scoring satisfactorily in the writing basic skills test.

Among sixth graders, 99 percent of 84 Bancroft students passed the reading section, while 98 percent scored higher than the minimum 60 needed to pass in both the math and writing sections.

Ninety-eight percent of 116 West Elementary sixth graders passed the reading test, 97 percent passed the math portion, and 99 percent scored acceptably in writing.

At South Elementary, the 6th grade figures were: 68 students, with 99 percent passing in reading, 100 percent in math, and 97 percent in writing.

Sanborn students shone the brightest, with perfect 100 passing scores in math and writing, and 99 percent of the 72 sixth graders passing the reading test.

School's Open — Drive Carefully

"A responsible driver cannot always expect young children to act appropriately in the traffic environment," stressed David J. Christensen, executive vice president of the Automobile Club of Merrimack Valley. "It is the motorist who must stay alert and be aware of potentially dangerous situations."

The AAA spokesperson explained why children form such a large part of the accident picture. "The 'dart-out' action - a child suddenly dashing into the street, often at midblock and from between parked vehicles - is the single most common young pedestrian behavior resulting in an accident," he said. "Youngsters may show little or no concern when moving vehicles are near. They simply assume a motorist will see them and act accordingly. In addition, their height, short attention span and natural exuberance are factors that place the major burden of responsibility for safety on the driver."

Christensen pointed out that the first few weeks of school mean greater exposure and thus greater risks for children. "Many of them walk to and from school and some will be doing so for the first time: School zones, bus loading and unloading areas and residential street intersections all demand extra alertness. Remember, a careful driver is the first step to an accident-free school year."

PROFESSIONAL QUALIFICATIONS

Did you know that becoming certified as a chiropractor requires 4½ years of training, after college.

Today's Doctor of Chiropractic must complete over 4,500 hours of classroom instruction and pass several rigid chiropractic board examinations before earning a license. Also, continuing educational seminars must be completed for annual license renewal.

PERSONAL BACKGROUND

I have completed courses in Kinesiology, Exercise Physiology and Physical Therapy, and hold a degree in Biology from Niagara University. While in Chiropractic College, I received awards for Outstanding Service as well as High Honor roll. I have also visited a number of other chiropractic clinics to study their methods and procedures in Kansas City, Mo.; New York; Atlanta and Wichita, Kans.

Additionally, I attend seminars held monthly in Atlanta and Chicago,to stay current on the latest chiropractic advances.

This is the kind of training and professionalism I offer you. If you have hesitated visiting a chiropractor, perhaps you didn't know that chiropractors go to such great lengths to continue their education and provide you with the latest techniques and the most qualified service. So, you see, what you don't know can't help you.

Call me today and let me help you.

Did you know the symptoms most commonly treated by chiropractors are:

☐ Back Pain	☐ Headaches	☐ Painful Joints
☐ Neck Pain	☐ Arthritis	☐ Shoulder Pain
☐ Stiffness	☐ Bursitis	☐ Arm/Leg Pain
Numbness	Hip Pain	Cold Hand/Feet

To introduce you to the healing world of chiropractic, please accept my special offer:

Bus route schedules continued through page 38A.

Be good on the bus, or else

Riding a school bus, says the School Committee, is a privilege. This privilege will be taken away from any student who is not well-behaved, courteous, or who endangers the health or safety of any student.

If a student does not follow the rules and regulations for bus students, the student will be reported to the school principal for disciplinary action.

Any decision revoking the privilege of a student to ride the bus will be made only by school authorities. Before such a decision, the matter will be discussed with the bus driver and the student, and the parents of the student will be informed. Before students can be reinstated, they and their parents must meet with the School Committee.

Here are the committee's regulations:

If you light a match, cigarette lighter or other flammable object, setting fire or burning any person or clothing, your bus privilege shall be suspended for the balance of the school year.

If you deface the bus or destroy property or open the emergency door without getting permission, your privilege will be suspended for one month the first time, for three months the second time, and for the balance of the school year the third time.

Any time a student defaces a bus or any part of it, restitution must be made by his or her parents, and the student will not be allowed back on the bus until that restitution has been made, regardless of whether the students had served his/her punishment.

If you're in grades kindergarten through sixth and you smoke on the bus, your suspension will be for a month with a reinstatement of the privilege only after a conference between the principal and your parents or guardian. If you're in junior high, suspension for first offense is one month, for second offense, it's for the remainder of the school year. If you're in high school and smoke on the bus, you will be suspended a month the first time and for the remainder of the school year the second time.

Fighting, molesting others and throwing objects other than paper or hats is also a no-no on the bus. First offense is good for a one-month suspension; second offense, two months; and three months, rest of the year.

Bus privileges are suspended for a week for pushing, shoving, indecent or abusive language, failure to obey the bus driver, throwing objects like paper, hats, scarfs and other misconduct the first time. Suspension is one month for the second offense and for the rest of the year for the third offense.

Montessori school gears up

The Andover School of Montessori is gearing up for another school year. The school, 180 Main St., in North Andover, offers stimulating education for children ages 3 to 6, including a kindergarten program.

The 1986-87 school year ended successfully with the addition of new playground equipment provided by the fundraising efforts of the parents. The equipment includes a balance beam, climbing apparatus, slides and driving wheels. This equipment complements the wooden swing set and large area where the children can run and play games.

Another addition to the school is a new adminstrator, Robin Johansen of Somerville. Johansen comes from the Boston YWCA where she was a director of the day care facility. She has been trained in the Montessori method of education and has extensive Montessori preschool experience as well as a bachelor of arts degree in psychology from the University of Tennessee.

Johansen replaces Margaret Fahy Albanese, who is retiring after 11 years with the school.

The Andover School of Montessori has found so much demand for a Montessori school that beginning this fall it will open a fourth morning classroom. Each class will be staffed with Montessori-trained and certified teachers. This expansion will enable up to 75 students to attend.

New materials have been ordered, and the fourth classroom will be equipped with $10,000 of Montessori materials. All of the teaching staff will return. The teachers are Sue Flynn, Peggy Gurman, Miriam Walsh, Sarah Spurgeon, Cynthia Genier, Laurie Taylor, Judith O'Neil and Kathy Reed.

The ASM is a parent-owned, nonprofit corporation which was organized in 1975. As such, the parents have first-hand input in their child's education. Each year the parents elect a new board of directors. The 1987-88 board of directors are James Bracken, president; Susan Broude, vice president; Brian Baker, treasurer; Cynthia Brown, clerk; Eleanor Armstrong, Diane Cohen, Joan Landers, Sherry Spiller and Maureen Trebbe.

Tina LaFranchi is the executive director and serves in an off-board capacity. Bracken, Broude, Baker and Brown also serve on the advisory committee. The other board members supervise various committees such as personnel, ombudsman, school policy/bylaws, fundraising, public relations and finance.

Montessori education is based on theory that children want to learn. It gives them new freedom in the classroom, piquing their interest with imaginative materials and letting them work at their own pace. The ASM goal is to ensure the normal development of the child's whole personality, including physical and emotional faculties as well as his or her intellectual powers. The teachers encourage the children to be independent and help them gain the self-confidence so necessary in the creation of competence. ASM is fully licensed by the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

The Andover School of Montessori has limited spaces available for 3- to 5-year-old children. In addition to four morning sessions, ASM offers an extended day program for kindergarten children and an afternoon program for the other children until 2:30 p.m. five days a week.

How to help a child learn

Plenty of rest and physical exercise, as well as a balanced diet, are necessary for your child's well-being. Schedule a complete physical examination with your child's doctor at least once a year, and be sure your child's eyesight and hearing are checked.

See that your child maintains regular attendance at school. It is far more difficult to make up work than keep up day by day.

See that adequate time and a quiet space are set aside for doing assignments.

Provide your child with as much equipment for studying as you can reasonably afford. He'll need a desk or free table on which he can spread his work. His reference library should contain at least a dictionary and perhaps encyclopedias, a thesaurus, and an atlas.

Check whether your child received assignments and that they are done neatly and on time. Make a special point of doing this early in the school year, and at the beginning of each term, to start good homework habits. Homework is an obligation he has to his school and himself, and shouldering his own responsibilities is part of the learning experience.

Emotional Requirements

First and most important, you can help your child see himself as someone who CAN succeed. Teach him that one setback is not the end of the world and that, with a little effort, he can bounce right back. Praise your child's successess. Emphasize his strong points - whatever they are - as evidence of his abilities.

Try to maintain an atmosphere at home that is relaxed. A certain amount of pressure is an essential part of motivation for learning, but do not pressure him to achieve beyond his abilities.

Maintain open lines of communication. Just by being there to talk - and to listen - you can improve your child's emotional environment for learning. To communicate, you must listen, and to listen to a child, you must be patient. Show an interest in things of great concern to your child.

Help your child lead a balanced life. He needs to devote the time to his studies and to recreational and social activities to develop his total personality.

Your child may - even unwittingly - do poor work just to get the attention it brings. While praise is a stronger motivator than reproff, he'll seek any kind of recognition rather than none. Your genuine appreciationof genuine accomplishments can spur your child to greater achievement.

Finally, if you have any complaints about the school, take them to the school and not to your child. Complaining to your child may only undermine his confidence in the school. Appropriate members of the school staff can tell you why certain policies exist and can change them if your comments show a need for change.

Intellectual Requirements

Make a realistic appraisal of your child's abilities. If necessary, talk to school personnel to help you determine his potentialities. Then set academic goals for and with your child that are within his reach.

Stimulate your child intellectually from the very beginning of his life. There is overwhelming evidence that a child's attitude toward learning are about saving you money on extended-wear lenses"

"I care...

Your Bay State Eye Associates eye doctor really does care about you. Because Bay State isn't like those big optical chain stores. Each Bay State Eye Associates "I Care" Center is independently owned by the eye doctor, who makes sure you get the best service, most thorough examinations, and best prices possible.

That's why your Bay State Eye Associates "I Care" eye doctor offers you genuine Permalens® extended wear contact lenses for just $99* a pair. Imagine all the comfort, all the convenience, all the ease of wearing contacts for up to 30 days without removing them...for $99*.

So visit a Bay State Eye Associates "I Care" Center today. You care about your eyes, and your eye doctor at Bay State Eye Associates says "I Care" too.

Healthy learning

largely formed before he ever enters a classroom. Stimulate a love for reading early in life.

Throughout your child's school career, always keep school work in perspective. Show that it is the most important thing he is doing during his growing up years. Respect his study time by not interrupting or distracting him and by keeping down the noise. His daily schedule should include time for family responsibilities and certain chores, as well as time to complete all school assignments.

Discuss your child's assignments with him, but don't do them. It's his pursuit of learning, not yours. However you can offer suggestions and point out sources of information. Large projects, especially, are just more fun when there is someone with whom to discuss them, someone who watches the progress with interest.

Encourage your child to develop interests related to his academic subjects to enrich his education. Take vacations to historic sites. Discuss the news events you watch together on television. Start him with a library of books recommended by the school or the public library. Give him a gift of his own magazine subscription.

Use every opportunity to show your child the relationship between school subjects and life. His responsibilities should become more complex as he learns and matures, and his interest is less likely to flag when he can see the point of learning.

You are vitually important to your child's pursuit of learning. you provide the physical, emotional, and intellectual foundation on which he builds his desire to learn.
